

My name is Kathryn McCray, I'm studying Rangeland Ecology with a minor in Ecohydrology at the University of Nevada, Reno. Thanks to the university I have gained hands on training in my career field. After I graduate in December 2023 my goals for my career are to plan and work on projects to preserve major ecosystems of the United States for generations to come. My project is on water and wind erosion on burned sagebrush steppe. This project helps focus on my interests of ecological sustainability after natural disasters.
