

Theodore Maranets is a graduate researcher and Ph.D. candidate in the Mechanical Engineering department at the University of Nevada, Reno. He is advised by Dr. Yan Wang and studies fundamental phonon wave physics with computational tools. Insights uncovered are then used to design various thermal materials, such as thermoelectric devices to be used in power systems of NASA spacecraft and instruments.